The NPIC representatives submitted two black notebooks containing NPIC's contribution to the Library to be retained in CIA custody. The NPIC representatives explained the layout of the material in the notebooks and pointed out that the documents listed in the bibliography consist of about 7 feet of file space. [redacted] stated he thought this material should be included in the Library as well. NPIC stated they will make a selection of photographs and analyses, both on the basis of importance and best quality.

Discussion was had on the question of future classification of reconnaissance material. [redacted] requested that NPIC prepare and coordinate through NPIC two statements: one for forwarding to the National Archives on the future handling of NPIC material with a view to its sensitivity. This statement should describe in a general way what the NPIC body of material consists of and should spell out conditions for the eventual release of the material.

A second statement should be prepared to accompany the actual material to our own Library archives. This could go into greater detail on the actual contents and could carry whatever slugs are needed for its secure handling. Included in this statement should be a complete setting out of the intended policy for the future use of the material. There should be a fairly liberal view as to when it would be appropriate to consider this material as releasable.

Mr. Lampshire stated that he believes it appropriate to look forward to making some of this material available in 20 years. Photographs might be releasable earlier than the read-outs.

There was some discussion as to the security of material in USIB and how to arrange for the release of COMINT material. It was agreed that a policy should be developed to cover what is already in the White House for the National Archives to follow.
